Tablet Orientation

Tablet Orientation varies with app usage. Apps with vast amounts of content meant for consumption generally are held in portrait orientation. In this condition, we use portrait orientation for our Adbook App.

Interactions: Gestures

Performing gestures and implementing accompanying behaviors are integral parts of interaction design. This is the expected behaviors for our platform and how Gulfstream apps should behave. (Here I use mobile gesture to give an example)

Tap  The illustration shows a light blue hand with the index finger touching the center of a smartphone screen. A small blue circle is drawn around the point of contact, indicating the tap gesture.	Pinch/Spread  The illustration shows a light blue hand with the thumb and index finger pinching the screen. A blue triangle is drawn between the two fingers, representing the spread or zoom gesture.
<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• iOS: Selects primary action.</li><li>• Android: Selects primary action.</li></ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• iOS: Zoom in or out.</li><li>• Android: Zoom in or out.</li></ul>

Interactions: Transition

An item on the screen opens or expands to fill the entire screen. This transition should also be used to close the item to ensure users don't feel lost.

Interactions: Transition

The view slides(usually left or right), pushing the previous view out/over of the screen. It is good for sliding navigation menus into view(drawer menu.) I used it for the advanced reserach(filter) in this IPad Adbook.
